Andover E. coli finding was from untreated water

By MICHAEL DANIELS

When tests Tuesday morning revealed the presence of E. coli bacteria in a sample of the Andover Water District's water, district officials followed the state's procedures and contacted customers to warn them.

But officials said Wednesday the situation was probably not as serious as first thought -- because the sample of water showing the bacterial contamination had come from water that had not yet gone through the normal disinfecting process.

'You would expect to see some bacteria -- that's why you disinfect.'

KELLY SCOTT

"You would expect to see some bacteria -- that's why you disinfect," said Kelly Scott, secretary/treasurer for the district's board of trustees.

But the operator drawing water for the test, "inadvertently left off the fact he was sampling untreated water," Scott said, and the state notification protocols automatically went into effect.

Customers were advised again to boil their water (a boil order has

Pipeline project is increasing Bethel's General Assistance costs As unsuccessful job seekers turn to town for aid

By MICHAEL DANIELS

In the long run it will, mean new tax revenues and perhaps even cheaper energy options, but for the present the natural gas pipeline coming through Bethel is costing the town money.

Each year the town budgets from $1,500 to $2,000 for general assistance, but in the less than three months pipeline operations have been going on here, Bethel has already spent more than $2,000 on pipeline-associated general assistance, Town Manager Phil Tarr told the Board of Selectmen Monday.

And the problem could grow worse, Tarr said, if as now appears inevitable the project is not completed during the current construction season. That could lead to workers or would-be workers remaining without employment in the Bethel area through the winter, as they wait for operations to begin again in the spring.

The project has already missed its targeted completion date of Aug. 7, and Tarr said he has been told that a November shut-down date will soon be announced. (A call Tuesday morning to the spokesman for the project contractor, Bechtel Corp., was not returned by press-time Wednesday afternoon.)

It is not current pipeline employees who are coming into the Town Office seeking assistance, Tarr said. It is more likely to be people who have been laid off by one of the contractors or who came to this area in hopes of finding work on the project.

One man seeking employment came all the way from California, Tarr said, accompanied by his wife and four children.

Such a family would be eligible for $900 a month in assistance from the town.

Half of the money the town spends for assistance is reimbursable from the state, and after 30 days applicants are expected to have switched directly to the various forms of help provided by the state.

"They can't live on what our General Assistance Ordinance would allow," Tarr said.

The selectmen expressed some surprise that the town was expected to support, even if only for a month, indigents who wander through.

But, Tarr said: "If they spent last night here, this is where they apply."

Selectman Bob Chadbourne expressed concern regarding people possibly abusing the system, and Tarr said that monitoring such assistance cases was time consuming.

In fact, he said, he had spent five hours Monday working on assistance cases and conferring with the Maine Department of Human Services.

This was one aspect of the pipeline project that had not been anticipated at the numerous hearings that preceded it.

"I never for a moment dreamed that the pipeline workers would become a burden to the town," Chadbourne said.

We're all pilgrims

By ALISON ALOISIO

The church services and wedding ceremonies at the West Parish Congregational Church are different from those of the Trinity United Reformed church in Plymouth, England.

But, says the Trinity minister and his family, the congregations have their similarities as well.

"We're all pilgrims," says Sarah Have, using the term in the general sense. Sarah is the wife of Rev. Peter Chave, the Plymouth church's minister.

The Chaves and their seven-year-old son, James, have been the temporary residents of the West Parish church parsonage in Bethel for the past month.

They traded their home -- and their church -- with Jean and Brendon Bass, the regular ministers of the Bethel church.

The idea for the exchange originated two years ago, when the Bases advertised in a denominational magazine in En-

Fryeburg officials warn of mountain lion in area Animal has also been spotted in Berlin-Gorham, N.H. area

The last confirmed sighting of a mountain lion in Maine was 60 years ago, but recent reports of a cougar being spotted along Maine's western edge are being taken seriously enough to prompt warnings to the public in nearby Fryeburg.

"This isn't a UFO case," said Fryeburg Selectman Brian Hill, who is also president of Fryeburg Fish and Game Club. "Some pretty reliable people say they've seen it through binoculars and there have been other sightings."

Hill believes there may be a mountain lion, also known as a cougar or catamount, in the area.

The unconfirmed sightings in the Fryeburg area were convincing enough for the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife to advise the town selectmen to get the word out.

June Irvine of Fryeburg Town Hall said the big cat has been spotted at the transfer station. And Hill said he was told that the cat was spotted in the Gorham or Berlin area in New Hampshire.

Paul Reynolds, formerly of Maine Inland Fisheries and Wildlife in Augusta, said there have been other reported sightings around the state over the past few years.

That includes a March 1996 case in which a woman saw what she thought was a mountain lion in Cape Elizabeth.

Game wardens who combed the area found some fur stuck on a tree. A laboratory performed tests on the strands of hair and confirmed it came from a mountain lion, Reynolds said.

"Based on everything I've seen, there's no doubt that there are cougars in Maine," he said.

Kristine Bontatis, a biologist for New Hampshire Fish and Game, said it could be a case of someone releasing a pet in the wild. But she says there would not be enough of the animals to reproduce.

"If a pet were released it could survive in this environment. There are simply not enough of them on this side of the country for viable reproduction," Bontatis said.

Hill agrees that if there is a mountain lion in the area, then someone must have put it there. "There's no way a mountain lion got here unless someone released it," he said.

NEIGHBORS BEHAVING REACTIVELY

To the Editor:

I have read the articles in the newspaper concerning the "boys' home" in Woodstock with more than passing interest. My daughter works at the home in Dixfield, and I have decided it is time for a voice of reason to answer the hysterics with facts.

One: All the boys who live in these homes are there because they know they have problems caused by past sexual abuse. They know they need help dealing with their histories and reactions. They want to be where they can get help from trained professionals on a daily basis. None of them are there against their own wishes.

Two: At all times the boys are supervised by people trained and experienced in the area. Every day the boys spend time with people who care enough to point out improper behavior and the logical consequences of such actions; something from which everyone could benefit.

Three: Parental visits take place only at scheduled times. No parent can simply "pop in" and take their son out for the day. These visits can be canceled by the boys, the parents and by the home personnel, if needed. If, for any reason, a parent cannot be trusted by home personnel, they are not allowed visitation.

Four: The boys are taught in the home until they can be fully trusted to react logically in public situations. Only if and when they are trustworthy are they allowed to attend public schools.

Five: All the boys in Maine "boys' homes" are from Maine. They are already local children who definitely benefit from being able to remain in state instead of being sent "outside."

Six: If the home in Woodstock is run the same as the home in Dixfield, which I'm certain will be true, the boys will not roam free over the 50 acres. They will be supervised continually when outside, by several trained people.

If I were given the choice of having a "boys' home" as a neighbor or people who have little feeling for the pain these boys have been subjected to, people who would prefer these boys grow up without working through their problems, then there is no choice. I'd choose the home.

Since I live in Bethel, people may think that where this new school is located is no concern of mine. My son and grandson live near the old Wilderness School and they will be neighbors of these boys. I am not worried about their safety at all because there is no reason to worry, at least not from the boys who will live at the boys' home.

Perhaps some of those 60 petitioners have memories equatable to these boys and know how poorly they have dealt with their own pasts. Perhaps that's why they are acting reactively instead of reasonably. If so, I can only hope and pray that they will realize their mistake and accept the truth that if we do not help our own children here in their homes, no one will.

HOW IT BECAME SO IMPORTANT

To the Editor:

I was very interested reading again the letter by Dr. Kneeland written in October 1958. It brought back memories about the reaction of some people to a "ski slide." Time has proven how wrong Dr. Kneeland's proposal was, indeed.

I know that "what was" can be very tiresome to current readers, but if I may, I'd like to refresh my own thoughts on what took place and tell the current readers how Sunday River Skiway became so important to the area.

The economy was not brisk in 1958. Many people worked for small wages and many businesses found it difficult to make ends meet. The Bethel Chamber of Commerce had discussed the problem and it was proposed that skiing might be an area that could be developed. In the early '50s a rope tow area had been built and there was an interest. The area was on Vernon Street about a mile from Main Street. The chamber membership accepted the challenge and tentative plans were drawn up and a site at Barker Mountain in Newry was proposed. The next step was how to pay for this proposal.

The Chamber of Commerce was advised that this idea must be done by a development group. As a result and as an outgrowth of the chamber, the Bethel Area Development Corporation was formed. They had the authority to develop the idea and to set up the Sunday River Skiway Corporation.

Through the efforts of the Bethel Area Development Corporation, stock was sold and about $70,000 was raised. Most of the stock was bought locally. Things moved along, land was acquired by lease. At that time it was felt that we needed all the cash available to purchase: T-bar, build a lodge, clear the slopes for skiing and build a road in to the area from the Sunday River Road.

We soon discovered that the money raised by stock sales was not adequate. Banks did not show much interest in a "ski slide." Individuals and companies were asked to provide materials and services for stock. Many accepted the idea and it was apparent that the area was behind the idea.

Sunday River opened for skiing in the winter of 1959. From that start, skiing was going to be an important part of the area.

What we have today is furthest from our wildest dreams but thanks to the present company, they have given us a sounder economy and a brighter future. With this, I hope we accept the challenge and be a part of it.

For sale: a Maine newspaper monopoly opinion

By MIKE BROWN

There are two daily newspaper monopolies in Maine, the Bangor Publishing Company, which has its media tentacles all over eastern and northern Maine; and Guy Gannett Communications, also family-owned, and holds among other media, the Portland Press Herald, Maine Sunday Telegram, Kennebec Journal and Waterville Sentinel.

The impending sale of Guy Gannett will bring some $200 million to the family trustees. The final sale reportedly is between two media moguls: The Seattle Times Company, owned by the Frank Bletcher family, and MediaNews Group, owned by William Dean Singleton.

The 900 Gannett employees are quivering in their ink that Singleton will win with his reportedly higher bid. Singleton also owns some 140 newspapers and profit is his ego.

Some interesting facts and concerns for Maine readers surround this sale, especially in the political arena. Guy Gannett papers have a decided leaning to the liberal left when it comes to editorials and in-house opinion columnists. And many Republicans and conservatives say its supposedly objective news columns are also southpaw.

When the news reached Gannett employees that Singleton was in the running as buyer, and perhaps leading the field, employees organized an outfit called "Save Our Hometown News." It was immediately dubbed by Republicans as "Save My Political Seat." Members of SOHN included Democratic state legislators and it was these partisan politicians who sought to have the state Legislature participate in a $150 million loan to SOHN so it could continue its partisan policies. And, of course, keep the employees' union unscathed.

One of the SOHN members was Sen. Chellie Pingree (D) of North Haven who has been the recipient of several Gannett papers' endorsements for her liberal legislative votes and initiatives.

Pingree told a reporter: "I think we were right to take the stands that we did which were very mild-mannered demands that were actually supportive of the way that the Gannett family has handled the newspaper in the past."

The employees' bid of a reported $150 million, whether or not any state tax money was actually implied, fell far short of being considered in the bid process which would be accepted by the Gannett trustees.

But the mere suggestion by Pingree or any other legislator that state money be used as loan collateral for a private monopolistic daily newspaper chain buy-out is grossly irresponsible for stewards and lawmakers of the people's business and their tax money.

It is plainly intended and even solemnized in both federal and state constitutional declaration of rights that there be a separation, not a collusion, of politics and publishing.

Newspapers are an important force in community and state politics not only in their editorial opinions of which they have a right to write, but with their power to determine what is and what is not "news." A newspaper's daily "coverage" is a subjective opinion of editors, publishers and even reporters.

And unfortunately more and more newspaper "news" columns are bleeding into "Newspeak," a language in which the words change their meaning to accord with the official party-political view of the writers. So said George Orwell in his "1984."

Newspapering has always been a business and must consider profit and loss statements. And the Gannett papers are no less. Those who would use state money to buy the company would have their political views paramount to publishing budgets, partisan over objective coverage -- and let political favors pay the piper.

A scenario for Democratic disaster. Whatever happens with the ownership of the Guy Gannett media group, its influence on Maine politics will prevail. Whether the buyer will continue its political allegiance to labor unions and Democratic political party ideology, or whether the buyer will re-tilt the fallow ground of journalism that has so often been the crop of the Guy Gannett media -- only time will tell.

Newspapers have been kicked around for centuries but they seem to endure over the critics such as this 1899 letter written by Mark Twain. "I have been reading the morning paper. I do it every morning well knowing that I shall find in it the usual deprivations and baseness and hypocrites and cruelties that make up civilization, and cause me to put in the rest of the day pleading for the damnation of the human race."

Nearly a century later, many agree with Mark Twain.

Briefly

Erosion grant accepted

BETHEL--It took the dozen voters who showed up for Monday's special Town Meeting less than five minutes to approve raising $15,000 to go toward halting erosion at the Northwest Bethel Road properties of George and Elizabeth Gilbert and John and Tracy Mason. The money, along with a conditional gift of $15,000 from the Masons, will be used to leverage an estimated grant of $90,000 from the United States Department of Agriculture. Both properties border on the Androscoggin River. Over the past 20 years the properties have lost and estimated 100 feet of land to river erosion, and in even a single significant storm there is the risk of losing an additional 15 to 20 feet, according to Don Murphy, town project assistant. To stop the erosion, the USDA plans to cut away and additional 25 to 30 feet on property to create a 2-to-1 rippapped slope. Monday's vote to raise the town's share for the project was unanimous. The project is expected to be completed this fall, Murphy said.

SAD44 workers have new contract

BETHEL--Custodians, kitchen managers bus drivers and mechanics in SAD44 will receive a 5 percent raise over the next three years under the terms of a new contract agreed to Monday evening by the School Board and the employees' union, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. For employees in their first year of service, the following wage rates would apply (after the employee completes a 60-day probationary period) during the 1998-99 school year: custodians, $8.61; bus drivers, $8.87; bus mechanics, $8.92; and kitchen managers, $9.94. For employees with five years of service in these positions, the hourly wage rate would increase by approximately $1. For the 1999-2000 school year, the first-year employee hourly rates would increase by 22 cents for custodians, bus drivers and mechanics, and by 20 cents for kitchen managers.

'Rose' finder dies in car accident

PARIS--Ronald Holden Jr., a discoverer of the 57-pound gemstone, "The Rose of Maine," died last week in a car accident on Route 117. Holden, 38, was riding in a 1975 Corvette driven by Jesiah Sande, 23, of Oxford, when the car overturned. Speed was believed to be a factor. Sande was injured in the crash and was taken to Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway. Holden and his brother, Dennis, found one of the largest gemstones in state history, a reddish morganite (a variety of beryl). They made the find in 1988 in a Buckfield quarry.

Stephens H.S. project gets funding

RUMFORD--A low-interest loan for $868,100 for the rehabilitation and renovation of the former Stephens High School building has been approved. The school is expected to become a community center and home for the Region 9 School of Applied Technology by the fall of 1999. The loan comes from Rural Economic and Community Development, and must be repaid over a 40-year period. Work on the renovation is expected to begin within a few weeks.

Bike storage available through MDOT

AUGUSTA--As part of its efforts to encourage increased bicycle use, the Maine Department of Transportation can help municipalities, employers and organizations provide bicycle parking and storage equipment. MDOT can offer discounted prices because the equipment is ordered in volume. Available equipment includes short-term low-security bike racks, moderate to high security racks, a bike rack-park bench combination unit, locking attachments to allow parking at parking meters, concrete posts with or without locking attachments, vertical storage racks, storage sheds and bike racks for buses. Rail station burns

BEECHER FALLS, N.H.--State fire officials are investigating the cause of a fire that destroyed a historic railroad station here. The station, built by the Maine Central Railroad at the turn of the century, was gutted by the Aug. 7 fire, but the shell of the building remained standing. The fire was reported at 1:20 p.m., by residents who saw smoke coming from the wooded area where the station, which has not been used for several years, is located. The structure was fully engulfed by the time firefighters arrived. The fire was considered to be of possibly suspicious origin, according to Fire Chief Henry Prehemo.

Loon Mt. proposes expansion

LINCOLN, N.H.--Loon Mountain ski area is trying again to get an expansion plan approved that will satisfy the U.S. Forest Service and environmentalists. The area, one of the state's largest ski areas, is seeking approval of a revised expansion plan to increase its number of trails by about 50 percent. The Loon Mountain Recreation Corp. has submitted the new proposal to the U.S. Forest Service for an expansion it hopes to complete for the 2000 ski season. The preliminary plan includes requests to construct water storage ponds for snowmaking to hold up to 220 million gallons, and add 124 trails to the existing 260. Rick Kelley, Loon Mountain general manager, said the plan would cost at least $20 million, not including the cost for the snowmaking ponds. Loon Mountain originally sought to expand in 1985, but the plan was stalled in court over the issue of available water for snowmaking.

DEP frustrated by mercury inaction

AUGUSTA--Maine officials boast they have the toughest environmental rules in the nation when it comes to mercury, but they're powerless to keep the wind out. Ned Sullivan, commissioner of the Maine Department of Environmental Protection, says he's frustrated over what he calls the lack of federal action to control mercury emissions on a national level. Sullivan says without federal action, it's impossible to keep mercury emissions from drifting into Maine from power plants in other states. "It doesn't seem to be on the (U.S.) Environmental Protection Agency's horizon," Sullivan said. Maine has the highest concentration of mercury in loons than anywhere else in the United States, Sullivan said. Mercury pollution is the major reason why Maine and 38 other states now warn people against eating fish from inland waters. Mercury harms the nervous system. Unborn children, children under the age of 8, and the elderly are the most vulnerable. Maine officials have regularly complained that despite their best efforts to clean up the environment, more must be done to stem the flow of out-of-state mercury emissions drifting into Maine, particularly from Midwestern coal-fired power plants. "It's totally clear this stuff is moving from west to east," Gov. Angus King said.

Riders evac'ed after chairlift accident

DURANGO, Colo.--Forty-two people escaped injury after they were stranded for two hours on a chairlift at the Purgatory Resort, officials said. The mishap occurred when a lift operator tried to divert a chair away from a passenger who had failed to step quickly away from the moving chair. The lift operator raised the chair and it flew into the bullwheel at the base of the ride, said resort spokesman Mike Smedley. Eighteen to 20 employees used rope harnesses to evacuate the stranded passengers, he said. The mangled chair was cut loose from the wreckage and the lift was reopened Monday. Resort officials will file a report on the accident within five days with the Colorado Tramway Safety Board, which regulates resort lift operations.

DEP to clean up home fuel tanks

AUGUSTA--The Maine Department of Environmental Protection has launched a pilot project to protect ground water from contamination by home heating oil spills. Funds historically reserved for cleaning up polluted water supplies will be used to upgrade corroded piping and unsteady tanks. Two million dollars has been earmarked. The number of reported spills at homes and small businesses has been rising dramatically, resulting in the contamination of more than 50 wells over the last several years. DEP has been responding, on average, to one backyard or basement spill each day. Typical cleanup costs $10,000 per site, but substandard systems can be improved for less than $1,000. Approximately $1.5 million of the cleanup funds will be distributed to the state's 11 Community Action Programs, to be used on the oil tanks of low income families who have drinking water wells.

From the Bethel Police log:

Phish run: 2 netted, 2 released

At 9:45 p.m. on Aug. 12, police received a report of juveniles consuming beer in a car parked at the Big Apple on Bridge Street. When police arrived, the suspects gave permission for a search of the vehicle, which initially uncovered drug paraphernalia and a usable amount of marijuana. A full search of the interior was then performed and in a backpack belonging to Robert Girvan, 39, of Lake George, N.Y., police located numerous prescription drugs belonging to Girvan. Police contacted the Maine Drug Enforcement Agency who sent an agent to interview Girvan. The Maine Attorney General's Office was also contacted. On the advice of the MDEA and AG officials, Bethel police arrested Girvan for two counts of trafficking in a Schedule W drug. Girvan was then transported to the Oxford County Jail where he was held in lieu of bail. Girvan was also found to have five felony warrants active in Colorado, but that state declined to extradite at this time. According to BPD, Girvan was on his way to the Phish concert in Limestone, as was the subject in the following incident.

At 9:50 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 14, an officer stopped vehicle for defects and observed numerous inhalants. Search revealed additional inhalants, as well as marijuana and pills. Yuan Zhagn, 23, of Charlottesville, Va., was summoned for drug possession and items were seized. MDEA was notified of the incident.

At 9:10 p.m. that same night an officer stopped and warned two subjects from New York about hitchhiking at night. The subjects, who were also bound for the Phish concert, were identified and released.

Wednesday, Aug. 12

At 01:09 a.m., a vehicle was stopped on Mason Street for operating with no tail lights. Macy Blaisdell, 18, of the Flat Road in West Bethel was arrested for operating after suspension and for operating under the influence.

At 4:46 p.m., police received a call reporting two juveniles acting suspiciously near a vacant residence on the Northwest Bethel Road. Police found the suspects, who said they had been picking crab apples and left quickly when seen because they knew they were probably not supposed to have been there.

At 2:30 p.m., an East Bethel Road resident reported he had received a call regarding the upcoming Trappers Weekend. The caller grew opinionated and concluded by saying sarcastically: "Have a safe weekend." Complainant reported that in the past threats had been made by animals rights activists to disrupt the event. BPS was invited to stop by the event at any time and walk through the area.

Thursday, Aug. 13

At 9 p.m. a Main Street resident reported receiving harassing phone calls from an apparently intoxicated male. Officer went to the residence and was given the telephone when another such call came in, but subject hung up before officer could identify himself. Officer explained complainant's options and complaint indicated he would fill out a phone trap request.

Friday, Aug. 14

At 7:10 p.m. a subject was stopped for speeding and a routine license check revealed her right to operate had been suspended for failure to pay a fine. Angela Hebert, 25, of Bethel was summoned and given a court date, then released to a licensed driver.

At 8:15 p.m. while on routine patrol an officer observed a four-wheel-drive vehicle operating in Mountain View Circle. Officer attempted to stop vehicle, but it fled, leading to a brief chase. Officer broke off pursuit when subject drove down a tote road unsuitable for the patrol car.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log, but does not include all reports of police activity. To reach the Bethel Police Department, call 911 in emergency situations, 824-3437 in non-emergencies. An answering machine takes calls when an officer is not in the office.

gland. The Chaves saw the advertisement and contacted the Besses.

Schedule conflicts prevented a swap from happening right away.

But then, said Peter, "They rang us on New Year's Eve and said, 'Are you still interested in coming to America?' We said we were."

The Chaves arrived on July 21. Between then and Aug. 17, they conducted church services, performed a wedding, visited parishioners' lakeside cottages and did a lot of sightseeing.

Church practices here took a little getting used to, said Peter.

There's the difference in hymns, for instance. The first Sunday, he said, "I picked out the three most popular hymns in England -- and none of them were in the (West Parish) hymn book."

After getting over that culture shock, he eventually made plans to use the Christmas carol "Joy to the World" for this past Sunday's service.

That song became popular in England, he said, after the movie "Love Story." It was played during a Christmas-time scene in the film.

Generally speaking, said Peter, services here are less formal than in England. But, he said, there is room for humor in both formats.

Then there are weddings. Chave performed one two weeks ago, and again, there were adjustments to be made.

"In England, I would lead the bride in. In America, I came in with the best man," he said. And, he said, the eight attendants taking part were more than he was accustomed to.

"In England, there would be one or two little children following the bride," Peter said.

Despite the differences, he said, "It was a lovely ceremony. We all managed to get through, and stand in the right places and say the right things at the right time."

Soccer and the Pilgrims

James also had his chance to take part in church proceedings, during a regular Sunday service. He offered the children's message.

The theme: the similarity between the qualities required to be a good sportsman and the qualities of the Pilgrim Fathers -- specifically, determination, hard work and guts, said James.

The sportsmen he had in mind for his comparison, he said, were the Plymouth Pilgrims professional soccer ("football") team.

It was a message, said Peter, that will probably be remembered here longer than any of his own sermons.

As for comparing aspects of Bethel and Plymouth aside from church practices, the Chaves noted the difference in landscapes.

They have enjoyed the opportunity to swim in the lakes here, Sarah said. In Plymouth, it's either a swimming pool or the sea.

Then there's the trees. When she first looked out the windows of the Besses' home, she said, it seemed as if the house sat very low to the ground, because the tree trunks were so thick.

As it turned out, she realized, the trees are just bigger than in England.

The space between houses in Bethel is also bigger. Plymouth's population of 250,000 is very concentrated. In Bethel, the houses are farther apart, with more land -- and more distance to walk between places.

"It's miles to the toy shop," said James.

Coming back to see more?

The Chaves played tourists in their time here, too, sightseeing locally as well as in Portland and Montreal. And after here leaving Monday, they planned to go to Boston for several days before heading home.

The importance of tourism in the Bethel area has not been lost on them. Said Peter, "We feel people take quite seriously providing vacations for people. We were impressed by how helpful everyone has been."

Sarah said her family would like to return to Bethel sometime during that colder vacation season.

"We want to see it in the snow," she said.

Andover

been in effect for AWD customers since October 1996), or to use bottled water for drinking, cooking, and washing dishes.

Three subsequent water tests were taken Wednesday, Scott said: one from untreated water, and two from water that had gone through the disinfecting process.

"We are confident that those taken after will come out as they always have -- negative," she said.

E. coli can cause bloody diarrhea, stomach cramps and chills. It can stomach cramps and chills. It can prove fatal, especially for children and the elderly.

The Andover Water District draws its water from Stoney Brook, an open stream that is susceptible to runoff containing human or animal waste -- the usual sources of E. coli contamination.

A new $1.6 million water system, using a drilled well, is under construction in Andover but is not expected to be on line before the end of the year.

Also in the Saco

Another E. coli incident, in the Saco River, led Buxton officials to close two popular swimming holes in last week.

The bacteria was detected by tests prompted when 8-year-old boy developed large, painful blisters on his hands after swimming in the river.

The swimming areas were reopened Tuesday, after subsequent tests indicated the bacteria level in the river had fallen.

Sunday River Valley

by Rockie Graham

Wednesday dawned wet and wild. We needed the water, but it was a day we planned to hike

Speckled Mountain. I dispatched my friend to neighbor Nancy's and we postponed for a prettier day. We considered ourselves lucky to have that luxury.

Thursday began sunny and cool. Although my hip and ankle ached, I ignored it and we packed up food, fleeces, water and other gear, piled into the Vista -- four adults, five packs and Tasha -- and headed to the trailhead for Speckled Mountain. Some of us don't learn easily.

It was a great day for a hike. The sun was high, but not too hot. We were well prepared and raring to go. There were people at the parking area, so we leashed Tasha, put on her pack, grabbed our own and began. Being strong, and on a leash, Tasha was kind enough to tow me up the early steep segments. When we reached a picturesque plateau, we let Tasha go. We know she would stay close. When she has her pack on she feels like she is working and won't wander too far. By the crest of the Blueberry Path I was peaked. After a second snack, we decided that time would not allow us to go further. Kevin had to return by a fast approaching hour. Had I not been so slow, that would probably not have been a factor.

A short time later, we let Tasha and the two 30-somethings lead, and the two pentagenarians followed. This turned out to be fortunate for a pair of lost hikers. Hiking over a plateau of solid rock, we encountered two older hikers that appeared headed in the wrong direction. We didn't realize how wrong, just that they were headed off any trail and into the wilderness. They had a map, but did not know what a cairn was or see the yellow lines painted on the rocks. They stayed with us quite a while, then set off down the path in front of us. I needed a rest.

We picked them up, lost again, and walked them to the parking area. Unfortunately, it was nowhere near where they had parked their car. Already having a fairly full car -- four adults, five packs and a fairly large dog -- and already being late, half of us stayed and the others took our lost New Jersey friends to their car. It was not where they thought, but was about 10 miles away. They reached their car, Kevin called to say he was delayed, they came back.

and picked us up and off we went to home. It is now four days later. I still feel like walking wounded, but Tasha's poor paw pad is healing and she dreams about her next adventure. I, however, am thinking about my next osteopathic treatment for my ailing hip.

While I whine away, we are preparing for the annual visit of my friend's teenage daughter, Tiffany. She arrives today from California for a three-week visit. We hope to take her to a few local sites and sights and perhaps do some coastal capers as well. Whale watching, moose watching and maybe some boating on Lake Winnepesaukee are in the plans, or ideas at least.

On other fronts, the garden still thrives in spite of my lack of attention. I have zukes, cukes, basil, carrots, kale and even some broccoli. In fact, I have the best broccoli I've ever grown. And don't forget the weeds. They are many and in a nice variety of sizes and shapes.

I'm not sure what is happening with the road. No lines yet, but the trucks were here for hours the other day and left piles of gravel on the side of the road. We don't know why, perhaps they will widen it, again.

One other whine, and then I am through. The presort bin at the recycling center is full, again, and there is trash strewn in the general area.

People need to know where to put their recyclables (the presort bin) and to put all other trash in the dumpsters. That is all. Have a good week.

Upton

by Eleanor LeComte

Every summer Margaret Mitchell and Tex Fogwell pay tribute to Margaret's mother, Ethel Ellingwood, at the place where Ethel was born on Back Street. On Aug. 14, the usually quiet neighborhood resounded with the happy laughter and chatter of her descendants and friends. They were blessed with beautiful weather, as usual. A bountiful table and barbecue was enjoyed by 43 guests. Those present were: Mrs. Tillie Grundy, Felicia Grundy, Felicia Griffin, Donna and Walter Griffin, Polly Raymond, Muriel Griffin, Muriel Dow, Elaine Presby, Nathan and Chris Jonsson, Lois Galas, Jackie Fedchenko, Wendy Trotter, Aimee Dunham, Andre Burnham, Joel and Robin Fedchenko, Christine Jason and Sara Trotter, Miranda and Paul Fedchenko, Richard and Jackie Donovan, Lou and Gary Dick, Amy and Rachel of Scarborough, Pat Meserve, Pat Doyle, Bill and Hazel Marles, Theresa Conley. Sadly missed at the happy time were Anna and John Rizzo, Pat and Carl Rhode. Some of the young people migrated to Screw Auger Falls for a cool dip in the stream. Some of the fun events were football, tennis and races with radio-controlled cars. A splendid time was had by all.

It was a quieter lakeside in Upton. Sue Nelson took off for Cape Cod and several points in New York state. She was accompanied by her daughter, Tara Murray.

Sandy and Gene Wixom, Richard and Ellie LeComte went to Bar Harbor and then traveled on the "Cat" (Catalamaran) to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. The "Cat" was only working on three engines, so it took three and a half hours at 36 knots, instead of two and a half hours at 55 knots, to reach Yarmouth. The fog was dense most of the trip and the seas were fairly rough. One fellow that we spotted spent the entire trip with his face buried in a "barf bag." Another lady turned a lovely shade of green. All in all it was a remarkable craft and we were quite pleased with the trip. After two days in Nova Scotia, we returned to Portland on the "Scotia Prince" with fair winds and smooth seas. It took 11 hours but was a great experience.

On Saturday I made a return trip to Joy Yarnell's flowers. I saw the loveliest lily that I have ever seen. The name of the lily is "Casablanca" or white house. The Yarnells live in a white house. The lilies bank the porch. There are 12 blossoms on one stock. It really is true when they say "you are nearer God's heart in a garden than anywhere else on earth."

I think the ducks and geese missed us while we were gone, because there were about 50 of them around the car when we were unpacking. They managed to do quite a job of splattering the driveway.

On Tuesday, Eleanor Brooks and Ellie LeComte met on the lake in their paddle boats. There was a lot of talking and very little paddling taking place. Eleanor B. was asking for some advice on how to poison her husband. The reason for this drastic statement is that Don B. says that if she wants a "party boat," she will have to wait until he croaks. I gave her my recipe for Broccoli and Horned Pout Pie. That might just do the job.

Mason Township

by Richard Grover

Verna and Dewey Thayer are blessed with seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren who are scattered from North Carolina to Pittsburgh, Pa., Chicago, Ill., and Los Angeles, Calif. So far this summer, they have hosted son Skip Thayer and wife Robin from Pittsburgh, grandson Greg Thayer from Los Angeles, grandson Daren Thayer from Portland, and grandson Scott Thayer and his wife Susan and daughters Jessica and Bonnie from Chicago. Their most recent visitor was Nancy Thayer (Skip's first wife) from Chicago and her mother, Betty Miller from Cape Cod. Grandson Steve Thayer, his wife Tracy and their baby, Justin, from one of the suburbs north of Chicago, are expected before the end of August, and they are hoping granddaughter Tracy and husband Norman Greenberg will pay a visit before they run another 300-mile race in Ecuador in September.

On another tack, it has been a summer for unusual animal sightings in Mason for me this year. You've heard the expression, "loose as a goose." I imagine, well, with now five of them around, I can assure you that the expression is well founded. Those suckers have a range of a good 18 inches when they first emerge from the barn. And they have the annoying habit of hanging around the doorstep and decorating the whole area with gooey, green gobs of goose grease. They even like to back up and decorate the lower part of the wall. Mona has had to fence off the front sidewalk and doorstep to keep them away; this is all the more annoying because I have a nice little pond across the road just for them, which I figured would keep them entertained. Wrong. Anybody want a goose -- cheap?

Besides the geese, we have a blue snake hanging around the garden, which I have seen on several occasions. Of course, nobody believes me when I tell them this, and I couldn't find the snake to show him to Shakeem, when he was here. Well, a few days ago, I saw the snake again, and brought it to the house to show Mona. At least, she now believes me, but she made me take the snake back to the garden. He's (she's?) a regular, what I call, garter snake, but instead of being brown and green, this one is brown and pale blue. Kind of pretty.

In addition, we have a bird-eating frog. A couple years ago, I caught some bullfrog pollywogs while smelting and brought them home to my pond. Now some of them are getting pretty good sized. One afternoon last week, I was walking around the pond after feeding the geese, when I saw one of the bullfrogs at the edge of the water with little bird feet and wing feathers protruding from his mouth. I immediately reported this to Mona, but, of course, she didn't believe me, and now I don't know which frog it was. Next time, I'll have to take the evidence up to the house before it is swallowed up. Now, that was just a juvenile frog; can you imagine his appetite when he is full grown? Look out geese.

Andover

by Tina Farrington

Ronnie and Richard Pelletier hosted the annual three-day Lohnes Trail ride this past weekend. The weather cooperated for the most part. Ellis River Riders members look forward to this yearly event of camping and trail riding from the old Lohnes homestead on the backside of Roxbury Pond.

Eight youth riders and their horses participated in a weekend of lessons and camping fun at the Ellis River Riders' arena in South Andover last weekend. The program was sponsored by the 4-H group, Bits-N-Bridles of Farmington.

Has everyone done their school shopping? School starts on Aug. 27. The elementary school will begin classes at 8:30 a.m. and students may enter the school no earlier than 8:10 a.m. The school day will end at 3 p.m. The changes came about due to separate bus runs for the elementary and middle/high school students. Watch for specific bus schedule times.

With Labor Day on its way, the Calvary Congregational Church announces its fall programs. Beginning Sunday, Sept. 13 (Grandparents' Day), Sunday School will resume at 9:30 a.m. with Morning Worship Services following at 10:45 a.m. Awana will start up with Fall Round-Up on Friday, Sept. 11, at 5:30 p.m. for all children grades K through six. High school Teen meetings will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 29, with volleyball and weekly meetings on Tuesdays at 6 p.m. at Scott Farrington's home. Funeral services were held Monday, Aug. 17, for Gerry Marston. Condolences are extended to Foster Davis and family and Mrs. Dwight (Ellen) Hutchins and family for the loss of their father, Clinton Davis, who passed away last week. His wife, Mrs. Ida (Peaslee) Davis survives of Rumford.

South Woodstock

by Andrea Wing

There was a nice article in the paper recently about Lenwood (Pete) Andrews and how many years he has been playing with a band in this area. Pete still plays often; I've heard him many times and it is really enjoyable.

Peggy Roberts called a while ago and asked if I wanted to go out for coffee at Trap Corner Store. I said sure, and we stayed there and visited for quite a while. One of the good things was that I got a chance to visit with Bob Heath and some others who frequent Trap Corner. We later went and visited with Tommy Poland where Peggy lived when she was younger. We had a great time.

Congratulations to Caesar Morgan and Harmany Mills, who were wed on Aug. 15 in Bethel. Caesar is a former South Woodstock man. We wish them much happiness.

Another wedding of a South Woodstock girl took place on Aug. 16 at the Adventist Church.

Amanda Hadley and Tommy Eaton were united in marriage. A reception followed. Much luck and happiness to both of them.

Stacy (Wilbur) and Corey Millett are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby daughter, Mariah Constance. Maternal grandparents are Sheryl Morgan and Harold and Doreen Wilbur of South Woodstock. Maternal great-grandmother is Minna, Morgan. Paternal grandparents are Lawrence and Constance Millett of Oxford.

My husband, Richard, received a nice card made on a computer thanking him for all the work he does mowing on the roadsides and church yard here in South Woodstock. The card was sent and made by Joyce Hathaway, a neighbor. Many thanks to Joyce for being thoughtful.

Richard and I traveled to Bridgton recently to celebrate my belated birthday and Sally Wing's birthday. We bought lobsters on the way and had a good time visiting. Rick Wing had been in Texas working for a couple of weeks so we couldn't get together before.

Last Friday, Joan Poland went with me to Leviston for a doctor's appointment to find out the results of the test I've been having at CMMC hospital.

Quote of the Week: "I've learned that I must never be in haste to end the day; there are too few of them in a lifetime."

Larry Billings, curator Woodstock Historical Society, reports that Robert, Mary and Paul Billings watched the museum recently.

First, I'll say "Thank you" to all who came to my party for birthday number 90 on Saturday, the 8th. It was an interesting afternoon and nice to visit together and brought many memories. I have spent much time reading and rereading my 61 cards. So, again, "Thank you."

Gordon and Joan Morgan had the Morgan Reunion at their home here at the same time as my party and had a good attendance.

On Sunday morning I was invited to go for a boat ride on Norway Lake, an unusual thing for me. So Bradley, Ann, Leonas, Fay and I went. It was exhilarating and scenic. I didn't realize it is so big. We viewed it from all locations and enjoyed it all. "Thanks, Bradley."

After that was over, I went to the farm for dinner and the rest of the day.

This last week was a successful one for haying at the farm. They made a lot of it, and by two men, both nearing 80 years of age.

There is one new among us; Molly, Brad's new dog. I haven't met her yet. I hope she is as nice as Bear was.

I have had several visitors this last week, one of which was Kathy Curtis.

Sally, Mary, Fay Holt and I were in Leviston one day this week. We had fun.

The gardens don't seem as good

Milton and Eleanor Inman enjoyed their granddaughter for a couple of days the last week. She had fun, too.

Leland Betts was here at his sister's for the weekend.

McAlister Reunion

The McAlister/McAllister Family Club held a reunion on Sunday, Aug. 9, at the Fire Barn in East Stoneham. There were approximately 120 people in attendance.

The registration started at 10 a.m. The business meeting was called to order at 11 a.m. by President Donald Farr. Secretary's and treasurer's reports were given. The club voted to keep the same slate of officers for the next two years: president, Donald Farr; vice president, Justin McAllister; secretary, Marilyn McAllister Jones; treasurer, Guy McAllister Jr.; trustees, Fr. Donald McAllister, Oniel Heath and Barbara Farr.

It was voted to meet again on the second Sunday in August of 2000.

The oldest family member, Myron McAllister, who turned 100 years old on May 23, was presented a huge birthday cake decorated to depict his many years of work. He ran a farm in earlier years, so there was a farm tractor and cows and a school bus to represent his 34 years as a bus driver conveying the children of Oxford and from school. Everyone sang "Happy Birthday" and Myron blew out his candles.

The one who traveled the longest distance was Phil Curtis from Spokane, Wash. Other states represented were Florida, Idaho, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and 13 towns from Maine.

The youngest family member at the time of the presentations was Steven Oberlander. The oldest and the youngest were both presented with a gift certificate to Wal-Mart.

A gift certificate to Shop 'n Save was raffled off and won by Mildred McAllister Pope of Norway.

The 50/50 cash drawing was won by Glendon McAllister of Woonsocket, R.I.

The dessert contest was won by Dawnalyn McAllister of Bridgton with her peanut butter fudge. She received a cash prize.

Music was furnished by Norm and Betty Decoteau of South Paris. The club invited everyone who wished to join them at the Highland Games on Aug. 15 at Thonias Point Beach, Brunswick.

Doreen Bartlett was there with her new book for sale entitled, "John McAllister of New Boston, N.H. and his Descendants." She can be reached for book orders at (207) 743-2621.

There were many old pictures on display and memorabilia from "days gone by."

Yates Family Reunion

The home of Bryce and Barbara Yates, on the Sunday River Road in Newry, was the meeting place for the Yates Family Reunion on Aug. 9, when members and descendants from the Estes and Eva Yates family, along with wives, husbands and friends, gathered to celebrate another year. The temperature was high and so was the humidity, but shade trees and a nice breeze helped make the day more enjoyable.

This week at the

Moses Mason House

An era of grace and elegance was recalled at the monthly meeting of the Bethel Historical Society held on Thursday evening, Aug. 6, at the Bethel Inn. This meeting commemorated the 85th anniversary of the dedication of the inn in July 1913. Panelists included Margaret Joy Tibbets, Elizabeth Bane, Steven Wight, and William Wight, with lots of help from the audience.

During the business portion of the meeting, president Walter Hatch announced that the next meeting would be the annual meeting to be held on Sept. 3 with a 6:30 p.m. potluck and the meeting at 7:30 p.m. Due to the presence of the major exhibit in the meeting room, the annual meeting will be held this year at Alder River Grange Hall in East Bethel. Speaker for the evening will be Dr. David Richards of the Margaret Chase Smith Library, who will speak on the history of the Poland Spring resort.

Selected for the Nominating Committee to report at the annual meeting were Lorrie Hoeh, retiring trustee, and John Brown and Margaret Davis, representing the general membership.

The "Gift of the Month" was a copy of "Marriage Returns of Cumberland County, Maine Prior to 1892," donated by George and Danna Nickerson of Bethel.

Exxon grant received

A $1,000 grant from the Exxon Volunteer Involvement Fund has been received by the Bethel Historical Society for the purchase of a video camera and related equipment. This gift was made possible through society president Walter Hatch, who is an Exxon annuitant and a very active volunteer of the organization.

"We are extremely grateful to Walter and to Exxon for this support," Charles Raymond, society Board of Trustees chairman, said in announcing the grant. "It will help us acquire another piece of equipment to record oral history interviews, monthly programs, lectures and other society events," he added.

With a membership totaling over 1,000 from more than 44 states, the society is western Maine's largest and most comprehensive full-time regional historical organization, dedicated to preserving and interpreting the regional past for present and future generations.

Its activities include monthly meetings, exhibits, lectures, special events, school programs, and publications. The society's operations are currently housed in the Dr. Moses Mason House (1813), which contains a period house museum, meeting room, research facilities and office. It is currently conducting a capital campaign to add another museum building to its holdings and establish a regional history center focusing on the northern New England past. Visit the society's web site (<http://orion.bdc.bethel.me.us/history>) or use its e-mail address (history@bdc.bethel.me.us) or call toll free 1-800-824-2910 for more information.

Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce

Change: Deadline for events for Bethel Heritage Days is now Friday, Aug. 21, at noon.

Again, is anyone going to the North Conway area? We still need someone to deliver the rubber ducks to the Jackson Chamber of Commerce. Please call 824-2282 if you can help.

Community members are encouraged to get involved with the planning of Bethel Winter Fest '99, which is slated for Jan. 7, 8, 9 and 10, Thursday-Sunday. Committee meetings will be held at the Bethel Inn the first Wednesday of every month at 10 a.m. The goal of the Bethel Winter Fest '99 Committee is to introduce visitors to the Bethel area by providing them with dining, shopping, entertainment and recreational opportunities.

Rumor has it the Zinchuks may roll back into town by Saturday. Keep your eyes peeled. (Minneapolis was their last check-in point.)

GREENWOOD-WOODSTOCK GIRLS' SOFTBALL—On Aug. 8, the Greenwood-Woodstock Senior League Girls' Softball Team won the Oxford Hills Summer Softball League Championship. The 14 and 0 Greenwood-Woodstock girls played against the 13 and 1 Mechanic Falls girls under the lights at Oxford's Pismo Beach field. The G-W girls went 12 and 0 in the regular season. The team was made up of girls, ages 14 to 18, from Greenwood, Woodstock, and Bethel. This is the second year in a row that this team went to the championship, last year losing to Otisfield. Saturday night's game was a close one in the first three innings, then the G-W girls went wild hitting, and fielding. The final play of the game was with one out, and a Mechanic Falls' girl on first. A ground ball hit hard to shortstop Stephanie Appleby was fielded, a quick toss to second baseman Amanda Miclon, and a rapid throw to Stacy Bachelder at first base ended the game in a double play 16 to 6. Big hits by Amy Hebert and Kimberly Baker helped G-W to their win. All the girls seemed to be on this night. Shown here (from left) are, back row: Coach Brian Dunham, Manager Herbie Dunham, Kim Hadley, Amber Bachelder, Sana Papaik, Kim Baker, Bekuah Howe, Stacy Bachelder, Allison Wiggin, Coach Jim Miclon. Second Row: Amy Hebert, Jen Walker, Stephanie Appleby, Amanda Michlon. Front Row: Sam Howe, Amanda Dunham, Amy Wiggin.

The pre-season stretch

With the time drawing near for local youngsters to return to their classrooms, some local adults are busily preparing for their reception. Julie Woodbury, left, joins other volunteers restoring the red-oak trim at West Bethel Children's Center, where Head Start classes begin Sept. 15. Crescent Park School first-grade teacher Mary Dunton, right, prepares her classroom for next Thursday's first day of school. (Photos by Rebecca Carter, left, and Michael Daniels)

by Marta Clements

The summer has flown by and preparations are being made for the first day of school. Students in West Paris will begin on Monday, Aug. 31. Faculty and staff will begin on Aug. 27 and 28. Kindergarten students will have a staggered start with a few coming in each day. Parents should have received a letter telling each child's schedule.

The kindergarten and first-grade teachers, Denise Biggers and Cindy Mullen, will be holding an Open House before school begins. It will be at the Legion Memorial School on Monday, Aug. 24, at 6 p.m. This will be a good time to meet your child's teacher and to find out what will be going on in those grades this coming year. Mark your calendar.

Grades two through six at the Agnes Gray School will be holding an Open House during the first week of school on Wednesday, Sept. 2, at 6:30 p.m. We will meet in the gym, where the teachers will be presenting the new reading program that we will be piloting this year. We are going to be using the upper levels of the "Open Court" series that is already being successful in grades kindergarten through two. It is a complete language arts program focusing on reading, writing, spelling and what we used to call English skills. We are excited about this program and are looking forward to the 1998-99 school year. Parents of children in grades two through six, mark Sept. 2 on your calendars.

Our parent volunteer group will begin the school year by seeing to the installation of two new pieces of playground equipment that arrived this month. The Legion Memorial School will be getting a new merry-go-round and the Agnes Gray School will be getting three levels of chin-up bars. We are fortunate in having a super playground and a super group of volunteers.

We hope everyone has had a tremendous summer. See everyone soon.

MAHOOSUC MONTESSORI CONCLUDES SUMMER SCHOOL

During the last week of the Montessori school in Bethel, students, along with two mothers and teacher Cyndy Kane Olson, drove to North Newry for an outing.

The purpose was to return pollywogs that had been brought into the classroom as babies (the first batch of eggs did not make it).

The little pollywogs had grown and were released back into the little pond from where they had been taken.

This was the second time several students had participated in this activity.

The weather was not as warm as last year, so after releasing the pollywogs the students had snacks by the fireplace and were read a story by Miss Cyndy.

A rock-cave that was crawled through last year could not be located, perhaps due to the heavy foliage. It has been found for next year's students.

In attendance were: Colby Allred, Ethan Allred, Sawyer Barter, Jebediah Clarke, Felicia Dumont, Angela Florino, Anna Haberman-Fake, Sage Morison, Faith Parker, Simon Smith and Cameron Thurston.

The mothers who helped in driving were Mrs. Nancy Florino and Mrs. Beth Clark.

Samantha Florino was a guest and enjoyed being with her sister's classmates. Miss Cyndy is looking forward to her third year with the Montessori school experience in Bethel.

How Do You Measure the Growth of A Child?

Unfortunately for children living in some of the poorest countries in the world, it takes more than fading marks on a wall.

Childreach, one of the oldest and largest child sponsorship organizations, measures growth by the number of hospitals, wells for clean water, and self-help programs we build in partnership with the proud families and communities where our sponsored children live.

For more information about Childreach sponsorship, please call 1-800-752-3400 or send in the attached coupon.

Forest Heritage Park Amphitheater to open

The Northern Forest Heritage Park Trust will unveil its new Riverside Amphitheater along the banks of the Androscoggin River at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 22, as part of its third annual Game of Logging Regional Competition and Festival.

The special opening ceremony will showcase the recently completed new outdoor amphitheater. The Riverside Amphitheater will provide permanent seating for visitors to enjoy the full schedule of logging games planned for opening day and will later host many other festivals, arts events, and demonstrations in the years ahead.

According to Julie Renaud-Evans, chair of the event, "The logging camp and amphitheater committee, along with community volunteers, have done an amazing job meeting this important deadline. We know visitors will appreciate the incredible view of the Androscoggin River and the mountains from the amphitheater and enjoy the full day of activities planned."

Building on two years of success, the Game of Logging Competition, scheduled in Berlin, N.H., remains a national semifinal and will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. with professional loggers "matching their timber harvesting skills in friendly competition," according to Jay Wheeler of Forest Mechanics, organizer and teacher. Events include tree felling, springpole cutting, bore cutting, and other demonstrations of modern logging skills. Safety and proper chainsaw maintenance are also emphasized.

The participants compete for prizes -- a $1,000 first-place prize provided by Acadia Insurance Company, a second-place prize of a new Husqvarna chainsaw, and the opportunity to attend the national finals held at Hocking College, Ohio. Pat Gagne of Milan, N.H., last year's winner, will be on hand to cheer on the competitors. To add to the festivities, qualified members of the audience will be invited to participate in leader competition testing their skill and expertise.

Participants are graduates of Game of Logging's certified training programs and come from throughout New England representing Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and the Province of Quebec. Jay Wheeler, a North Country native, has been instrumental in bringing this national competition to the Heritage Park and in promoting the forest safety program. In speaking about last year's success, Wheeler stated, "Heritage Park has been one of our best sites with the most enthusiastic audiences we've had. We are all looking forward to coming back and to using the new amphitheater site."

Free hayrides will be available throughout the day, sponsored by Geo. M. Stevens Insurance, with three activity tents of displays on the working forest, local history and heritage, and other hands-on educational activities. Along with woodcarving demonstrations by Brian Lamarre and Bob Morin, log building activity by Tom Bembridge, Heritage Park builder, and a fine assortment of specialty food vendors, the day is planned for the enjoyment of the entire family.

For further information, contact the Northern Forest Heritage Park, 961 Main Street, Berlin, N.H., or call (603) 752-7202.

Matters of Health

From Boston University Medical Center

Kidney Disease: Understanding "kidney failure" and dialysis
I hear the terms "dialysis" and "kidney failure" a lot. What do these terms mean, and what exactly is kidney disease?

Kidney disease refers to a wide range of disorders affecting the kidneys. The causes, severity and long-term effects of these illnesses vary. Some, like kidney stones, generally are not serious if complications do not develop. Others, such as kidney infections, are usually treated successfully with medical therapy, but can be very serious if not treated. Kidney disorders caused by high blood pressure, diabetes and negative drug interactions, meanwhile, can be dangerous. Sometimes these conditions can be held in check by addressing the source of the problem; other times, they cannot. Regardless of the underlying cause, all forms of kidney disease have the potential to damage the kidneys to the point where they can no longer function. When complete functioning has stopped, kidney, or renal, failure is said to have occurred.

Some forms of kidney disease are acute, developing over a period of hours or days. More often, however, they are chronic conditions that develop over many years, often not showing symptoms until they are well advanced. Kidney disease affects 13 million Americans, leading to 78,000 premature deaths each year.

The kidneys play a crucial role in the body's circulatory and metabolic systems, filtering waste products and toxins from the blood while returning nutrients to the blood stream. They receive more blood from the heart than any other organ in the body, and, in controlling the force and volume of this fluid, they play a major role in controlling blood pressure. These roles make the kidneys particularly vulnerable to injury either from concentrated drugs or toxins or from the long-term effects of hypertension. A chemotherapy drug being used to treat a cancer patient, for instance, might prove toxic in its concentrated form in the kidneys. Untreated high blood pressure could, over the course of years, damage the organs' walls. At the same time, the kidneys are extremely resilient, says Douglas E. Mesler, MD, clinical director of the renal section at Boston Medical Center. In many cases of chronic renal failure, 90 percent of kidney function has been lost before symptoms are apparent.

While the sometimes insidious nature of kidney disease can make it dangerous, the slow progress of many disorders affecting the kidneys also allows time, in some cases, for the diseases to be treated, either preventing or slowing the progression to kidney failure. Hypertension, for one, can often be controlled through medication and other therapies. When medical treatment no longer is sufficient, or fails, however, end-stage renal disease can occur. Diabetes is the leading cause of permanent kidney failure. Studies have shown that careful medical management of diabetes can reduce the rate of kidney injury. This intensive management involves early identification of the disease and a commitment to the use of medications and insulin.

Acute cases of kidney disease can be treated and are frequently reversible over time. Acute renal failure, generally resulting from shock, infection or drug reactions, is an emergency, but it is treatable, if not by medications then with dialysis, a process in which an external kidney machine filters waste products and toxins from the damaged organ and returns nutrients to the bloodstream. Dialysis in acute patients is carried out until the kidney has repaired itself, a process generally ranging from two weeks to two months in most cases.

Chronic dialysis is used when the kidneys are unable to repair themselves. In some instances, patients will eventually receive a kidney transplant, but there are restrictions in finding suitable donor matches, and transplants, despite the newest medications, are inherently risky, mostly due to the risk of infection. The obstacles to transplantation force most end-stage renal disease patients, 170,000 Americans at present, to resort to chronic dialysis for the rest of their lives. Patients use the artificial kidney machine three days a week for approximately four hours at a time, either on an outpatient basis or at home. While chronic dialysis may restrict a person's lifestyle, it is the sole reason that all patients using the machine are alive today.

This "Matters of Health" was written in cooperation with Douglas E. Mesler, MD, clinical director of the renal section at Boston Medical Center. Readers with questions about kidney disease, or who wish to discuss other health issues, may contact the BMC Health Connection at 617-638-6767.
